Article 2 In view of the fact:

(i) That the law enacted in May 1961 by la Republique du Cameroun accorded Cameroon nationality to citizens of Ambazonia, if and only if Ambazonia became a state in a union comprising Cameroon and Ambazonia;

(ii) That the creation of an illegal Union the Federal Republic of Cameroon, (FRC) or United Republic of Cameroon (URC), did indeed vested Ambazonians with Cameroon nationality;

(iii) That the URC Restoration law 84/01 of January 1984 did dissolve the illegal union and thus restored the two nations to their original positions as separate and independent of each other;

(iv) That the dissolution of the union automatically deprived Ambazonian of Cameroon nationality; and also limited the authority of Yaoundé to the east of the Mungo River where lies the territorial frontiers of Cameroon;

(v) That in the 1992 Cameroon Presidential elections which was won by an Ambazonian John Fru Ndi, the Cameroon Supreme Court found that by reason of the fact that the URC law 84/01 has deprived Ambazonians of Cameroonian nationality it would be totally unconstitutional to declare and install Fru Ndi, a non Cameroonian, as President of Cameroon;

(vi) That in the results the Cameroon Supreme Court declared Paul Biya, the defeated Cameroonian national elected in the place of Fru Ndi, the winner;

(vii) That the European Union Parliament in November 1992 passed a resolution rejecting the results of the said Cameroon presidential elections and appointed a Commission into the conduct of the said elections;

(viii) That the European Union was obliged to back down once their lawyers established that the URC 1984 Restoration law had deprived Ambazonians of Cameroonian nationality;

(ix) That quite recently the Cameroon Presidency launched the Memoirs of General Pierre Semengue which revealed that they—the military had completed plans to kill Fru Ndi and topple his regime, if the Cameroon Supreme Court had done the grossly unconstitutional act of declaring and swearing Fru Ndi, a foreigner, as President of Cameroon;

(x) That President Biya's insistence on ruling Ambazonia, which the URC law 84/01 has put out of Cameroon jurisdiction is only to enable him exploit the oil, agricultural and mineral wealth of Ambazonia, and in so doing is defying:

(1) Cameroon Military Tribunal Judgment of 3rd February 1986 which confirmed that the Restoration law has legally limited Cameroon jurisdiction to the east of River Mungo, which is Cameroun's boundary at her independence of January 1, 1960;

(2) Cameroon High Court judgment of June 1992 HCB/28/92 which inter alia ordered the expulsion of all elements of Cameroon rule from Ambazonia;

(3) The United Nations Committee on Civil and Political Rights judgment of 17 March 2005 demanding an end to the Cameroon illegal rule over Ambazonia which has led to the persecution and exile of the Ambazonian leader and contrary to the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights;

(xi) That the occupation of Ambazonia by Cameroon, thus constitutes an act of war on Ambazonia and thus demands a response within article 51 of United Nations Charter.

Now then in response to the forgoing, and for the purpose of terminating the on-going Cameroon aggression the following measures have been taken:

Article 10 Any ambiguity in the wording or the implementation of this Proclamation, the modalities of which would be the object of a subsequent ordinance, shall be resolved by the National Council for Liberation of Ambazonia (NatCoLamb).
